(Updated 04/25/12) The APWU won an important arbitration case on April 18, when Arbitrator Shyam Das ruled that the Postal Service cannot require employees to use forms developed by the Department of Labor (DOL) when they submit certification for leave under the provisions of the Family & Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Das' ruling overturned a Postal Service policy, announced on July 6, 2010, that required employees to use DOL forms.
